Lancaster, PA: Lancaster's Recycling Program

Democracy for Lancaster (DFL) hosts a presentation on Lancaster City's recycling program on Wednesday, September 5, 6:30 – 9 pm in the Lancaster Public Library's Windolph Room. Mike Devaney, Head of Solid Waste & Recycling for the city of Lancaster will explain what, how and why the city recycles.

“Recycling is a simple thing each of us can do to make a positive difference on our environment, and the more we know about the process, the more effective we can be,” says Jane Shull, DFL member who initiated the idea for the presentation. Bring those questions you've had about why we don't recycle milk cartons, what to do with dead computers and used car oil and how to make recycling easier for people.

The program is free and open to all.

DFL meets the first Wednesday of every month. For more information about DFL, visit www.democracyforamerica.com, click on “DFL link,” and enter your zip code in the search field. You can also contact Democracy for Lancaster's Chair, Don LeVasseur, at 717-475-8592.
